COUNCIL COUNTS ABSENTEE VOTES

A meeting of the City Council was held last Monday night, at which time the ballots of absentee voters were counted, after which a resolution was passed by the members of the City Council announcing the result of the election.

There were eighteen absentee voter ballots, a tally of which showed the following result: Adams, 6; Armando, 6; Callan, 0; Chesney, 7; Connolly, 5; Hansen, 2; Selmi, 11; Smith, 12; Sundermann, 10; Twesten, 10.

Including the absentee votes counted Monday night, the final result of the city election on April 9 stands as follows:

|---|---|
| Adams | 1322 |
| Armando | 1271 |
| Callan | 200 |
| Chesney | 1383 |
| Connolly | 1204 |
| Hansen | 335 |
| Selmi | 1414 |
| Smith | 1618 |
| Sundermann | 1407 |
| Twesten | 1457 |

Following the canvass of the ballots, the newly elected councilmen, Selmi, Smith, Sundermann and Twesten, were sworn in by City Clerk B. C. Ross.

The councilmen then selected H. H. Smith to again serve as mayor. All city officers and employees were reappointed, with the exception that Dr. A. A. Shaghoian was appointed health officer, succeeding Dr. F. P. Callsen, who declined re-appointment, and Miss Mary Lewis was appointed assistant librarian at the Daly City library, to take the place of Mrs. Beulah Schramm, who also declined re-appointment.

BUDDY POPPY SALE LAST WEEK IN MAY

The local Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States held their regular semi-monthly meeting at the Masonic Hall, Friday night, April 13. Among the many important matters taken up was the annual sale of the "Buddy Poppy," held annually the last week in May. This year, success is more necessary than ever, due to the problems which we are all very familiar with. The committee, under the able leadership of Comrade Maasberg, is making rapid progress and laying plans for a very extensive campaign.

On Friday and Saturday nights the Daly City Theatre will display the educational picture, "The Forgotten Man." With the co-operation of Mr. Emmeck, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion are taking an active interest in the showing of this picture, and a parade will be held by the two organizations on Thursday and Friday nights. This picture should be seen at all costs. It is a very instructive one, and with the propaganda that is being spread by the communists and pacifists, it is urgent that the general public be awakened to the fact that preparedness is necessary and the only way we can be safe from the horrors of war.

The regular dance held by the Post monthly will be conducted on Saturday night. These dances are becoming more popular and a larger attendance is noted. They are bringing in many people from adjacent cities, and a real good time is assured all who attend. Comrade Collins is to be commended upon the manner in which these dances are conducted.

The meeting of the San Mateo-Santa Clara Counties Council was held on Saturday night, April 14, in Redwood City. This Council is composed of all Veterans of Foreign Wars units in the two counties. Americanization is one of the problems now facing the veteran, and a program has been outlined and will be functioning by the time the proposed demonstrations are held by the Communists in May. As a rule these are held on May 1 and May 30, under various names. The public should not be misled by the names under which they operate. Correct information relative to these so-called organizations can be obtained by contacting the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

HOME FARMS TO RESCUE OF RACING

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Encouragement of breeding is one of the most important factors in the building up of racing on the broadest of foundations in California. Ideal for the production of the blood horse, all the people have to do is to see that the state takes full advantage of its unexcelled opportunities. Not even the vaunted Blue Grass or the more distant historic nurseries of England, where the thoroughbred originated, can raise runners superior to those of our own West, whether it comes to the possession of speed or the more enduring qualities that have made the blood horse universally admired down the years.

Maintaining a breeding farm is expensive, as my experience at Heather Farm amply demonstrates, and the creation of sentiment that will make it as easy as possible for the breeder is imperative. The true sportsman is in the game for the sake of the sport, but no one of any vision would expect him to take a substantial loss season after season.

Inquiries show how many men of affairs are contemplating going into the breeding line, perhaps on a comparatively small scale at first, but still they have well formed ideas about embarking in the fascinating pastime. For breeding, as racing, is a recreation, not a commercialized pursuit, as some folks seem to think.

Prizes to breeders are essential and we must keep that thought uppermost in the next few years, when the sport of racing will either move forward to great accomplishments or fall back as in the period prior to its revival by me at Tanforan.

We must have more horses, and the best way to increase the supply is by the proper encouragement of breeding in our own counties, north, central and south. Great performers have been turned out before in California, and such a happy consummation of maturing plans can be brought about once more. Plenty of medium class gallopers are needed, too.

We must remember that along with the expansion of the breeding industry the commission on the pari mutuel pools at the race tracks must be reduced from twelve per cent to nine per cent.

LEGION PROTECTS SCHOOL SYSTEM

The American Legion has issued a call to its Posts throughout the nation to take an immediate and active interest in the preservation of our school system.

Thousands of closed schools in the rural districts, and crippled educational organizations in the cities have aroused national Legion officials to a recognition of the danger to the youth of the land, either in imparing his facilities for acquiring an education or in depriving him of the facilities entirely.

Merritt Brady, Americanism Chairman of the Eigth District, in a public statement has offered the aid of that organization should it be necessary anywhere on the Peninsula in maintaining the standard of our local school systems.

"The American Legion," says his statement, "believes that the security and perpetuity of this nation depends upon the patriotic education of its youth. Contrary to a rather universal idea, American Legionnaires are banded together for a great deal more than the selfish interests of which they are often accused, that of being interested solely in legislation which will benefit the veteran. The youth of America is its most important asset and they must receive the proper education to direct their energies into constructive channels.

"The young man or woman, thrown prematurely into a chaotic world, where there are few positions open to him or her in times like these, and where the demand is increasingly for men and women of good educational background, is handicapped from the start. There is a well organized movement on foot to so curtail the school course that the child of parents who cannot afford to pay will discontinue his schooling with the elementary grades. The movement even proposes to reduce elementary school training from eight to seven years. Money saved through such proposed economies, we fear, may only be spent many times over in juvenile courts and houses of correction.

The local Posts of the American Legion are vitally interested in the educational problems and in raising, rather than lowering, the educational standards. Daly City Post offers the assistance of this Post, its Auxiliary and its District, State and National organization in working for the defeat of any movement which will tend to demoralize the school system."

TANFORAN RACES EXTENDED 20 DAYS

Tomorrow (Saturday) the Tanforan Spring Special will be the feature attraction of the day at Tanforan race track in San Bruno. For several seasons the track has offered this attractive event during the Spring meetings, and it has won wide popularity among stable owners.

The feature will be a mile and a sixteenth, and will offer the outstanding distance horses at the track an opportunity to show their ability. The race will be for three-year-olds and upward, and the purse will be $1,000 added.

Reports from the track this week indicate the option play during the present meeting is very near the million dollar mark, showing the confidence in the present management, which has won the commendation of the California Horse Racing Board. Because of the increased popularity of horse racing this season, an extension of 20 days has been granted by the state board on application of J. W. Marchbank, director general of Tanforan. This gives the meeting 50 days.

According to information from the track, this meeting has been one of the most successful ever held in San Bruno. This week Mr. Marchbank announced he is planning $100,000 worth of improvements for the track during the coming year, having been assured by the state board of Spring racing dates next year.

These improvements will include construction of a steeplechase, landscaping, chutes at the six furlong and quarter posts, heating and other improvements for the grandstand and clubhouse, and additions to the parimutuel department. It is expected that next year Tanforan will split the racing days allotted to the San Francisco area with the Bay Meadows track in San Mateo.

Tomorrow there will be an auction of thoroughbreds at the San Bruno track. These horses are from famous breeders on Mr. Marchbank's Heather Farm. About ten promising babies will go under the hammer.

There will be no racing this Sunday at Tanforan, but next Sunday a gala program is being arranged for Shrine Derby Day.

SON OF PIONEER RESIDENTS PASSES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

The funeral was conducted from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., last Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Interment was in Olivet Memorial Park.

EPOCHAL SILVER MOVE IMMINENT

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Interest in silver and silver mining is growing apace and experts are hard at it pointing out the advantages coming to the country by increased use of the white metal. Not so long ago I read in a widely circulated daily newspaper:

"The silver nations are looking hopefully to America to recognize and accept their silver money, the favorite money of America, the money with which our discerning forefathers built the foundation for our amazing development."

In all the discussion of the silver problem we should not forget three-quarters of the world is upon a silver currency base.

Robert H. Hemphill, a well known financial authority, recently posed this pertinent question:

"Are we to issue permanent sound currency in sufficient and scientifically calculated quantities to enable the citizens of this country to transact their normal business of creating and exchanging wealth and trade with the hundreds of millions who would under unrestricted circumstances absorb our total possible production?"

Silver is an extremely important factor in the reasonable working out of an answer to that query.

* * *

Gold mining is making rapid strides under the modern regime that began with the Roosevelt administration, and now it is silver's turn to be given a good boost. Next Monday in Washington what is known as the "silver bloc" will hold a meeting to form plans to "get something constructive" in the way of monetary legislation.

Two silver measures are pending in Congress. The Dies measure, which provides for acceptance of silver from foreign countries which buy farm surpluses, has passed the House and gone to the Senate. The Fiesinger bill to provide for the purchase of a billion and a half ounces of silver, or as much as is necessary to restore the 1926 level with currency issued against the silver so acquired, has been reported out of a committee of the House.

Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, has stated that remonetization of silver would be discussed in the Congressional conference Monday. He said:

"The purpose of the meeting is to consider all possible ways and means of taking action toward settling the monetary problems of the people of the country."

It is well known President Roosevelt is anxious for Congress to thoroughly discuss the monetary situation prior to the adjournment of the nation's law making body.

As to returns from gold mining with the price of the yellow metal at its present high figure, experts can see nothing but wonderful results. Canadians, as well as far-sighted citizens of the United States, are naturally optimistic as to the prospects. As I have pointed out on a number of occasions, Alaska, with its vast territory, can support a vast army of youth and middle-aged men through development of both its agricultural and mineral resources.

Canadians are saying the price of gold, standing at $35 an ounce in the United States and at slightly lower figures in Great Britain and other European countries, is having its effect upon all of the Dominion, and especially British Columbia, and that they will profit more than any other people on earth from the development of mining.

It is truly said that upon the miner and the prospector, aided by capital, future prosperity is dependent.

SEVENTEENTH DISTRICT P. T. A. HOLDS ANNUAL CONVENTION

The seventh annual convention of the Seventeenth District Parent-Teachers' Association began its session in the San Mateo Junior College, Thursday, April 20, and continued until this Friday afternoon. The theme was the three C's—Character, Citizenship and Culture. Some of the speakers were Dr. Claude A. Shull, Dean of Golden Gate Junior College, San Francisco; topic, "The Fourth 'R' in Education; Dr. Willard Givens, superintendent of Oakland schools; Dr. Aurelia Reinhardt, president of Mills College, topic, "The Contribution of the American Family to Culture."

Voters Provide School Bonds

With a majority of almost three to one, the $75,000 school bond issue designed to prevent further overcrowding of South San Francisco's schools was carried to victory Thursday of last week. A total of 809 votes were cast, 596 for the bonds, and 206 against the proposed issue.

VETERANS TO SEE 'FORGOTTEN MEN'

Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, will sponsor the film "Forgotten Men," at the Daly City Theatre, tonight and tomorrow night, Friday, April 20, and Saturday, April 21, with Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars. This film was not taken in Hollywood, but is made up of the official War Department pictures taken by the U. S. Army Signal Corps, and are authentic pictures of the American forces in action in France. We urge everyone in Daly City to see this picture, as it shows, better than anyone can describe, what the men went through in 1917 and 1918, and the need of an adequate national defence to prevent the United States from being drawn into another such conflict. It will not only benefit adults, but also the children of our city.

At the next meeting, Wednesday, April 25, Daly City Post No. 410 will be featured in a broadcast over Station KQW, at San Jose, from 8 to 8:15 P. M. A radio will be installed in the hall, so all members are urged to be there early.

One of the novelties offered by the dance commitee at the next social dance to be held in the Happy-Go-Lucky hall, Saturday night, April 28, will be Jackie Hartman, the 12-year-old radio star. Jackie was born in Stockton, and has been in several programs for Karl Ross Post No. 16, and radio Station KGDM of Stockton. He has appeared on programs at the Warfield Theatre with Rube Wolfe and Jess Stafford, and in the Capers over Station KTAB, in San Francisco.

The San Mateo County Council of the American Legion will be held in Legion Hall, Daly City, Friday, May 4. All Legionnaires are invited to attend this meeting and show the visiting delegates that Daly City Post is on the job.

An initiation of new members will be held at the first regular meeting in May, Wednesday, May 9. The ceremony will be conducted by the Eighth District ritualistic team. This team consists of members of various Posts of the district. District Commander R. L. Crane, of Daly City, is Captain of the team. Other members of the team are Commander Glen Hall, of Redwood City Post; Past Commander Joe Faso, of Redwood City Post; First Vice-Commander L. M. Hill, of Daly City Post; Second Vice-Commander Stewart Ward, of Belmont Post; Chaplain C. W. Kriens, of Advance Post, and Sergeant-at-Arms, District Second Vice-Commander Charles Dodd, of Greater Mission Post.

All members of the Post who have not been initiated are requested to be present.

Following the Aerial Pickup of April 15, Department Commander Homer Challieaux announced the department membership standing as 45,948.

Old Glory Auxiliary Celebrates Birthday

The banquet room of the Masonic Hall was the scene of a festive occasion last Friday after the regular meeting of the Ladies Auxiliary of Old Glory Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, the occasion being the third birthday of their organization. Mrs. Marie Gaiter, Mrs. Dorothy Eratt and Mrs. Edith Frazier were in charge of the refreshments and social arrangements.

The tables in the banquet hall were artistically decorated with spring blossoms. The department senior vice president. Mrs. Margaret Hubbard, and Mrs. Margaret Donohue, department chaplain, were the honored guests of the evening.

After a delightful repast the happy group adjourned to the social hall, where a dance was enjoyed by all present.

Members of the drill team, your attention is called to note that drill activities will again be resumed with meetings as usual in the Daly City Auditorium. The first meeting to be held will be Wednesday evening, April 25. The driil manager requests your presence.

Manuel Gabriel Passes on

Manuel Gabriel, employed on the Capura Ranch, passed away last Sunday after a long illness. He is survived by his brother, Charles Gabriel, who is in charge of the funeral arrangements being conducted from W. C. Lassewell & Company's undertaking establishment.

Woman Injured in Automobile Crash

Miss Mary Bostwick, 31, Sacramento stenographer, was badly cut about the back of the head last Sunday night when an auto in which she was riding with Robert C. Perry, of Palo Alto, went over a bank beside the Skyline boulevard just west of San Mateo.

BOARD REFUSES DUMPING PERMIT

The San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday again unanimously denied San Francisco's application for a permit to dump garbage at Mills field under the fill and cover system. No reason was advanced by the board for the action, which is the second they have taken against the airport dumping.

In addition, the supervisors, at the request of Supervisor Albert Witt, ordered a resolution drawn asking San Francisco to respect the county's wishes in the airport garbage dumping, and refrain from appealing to the courts. However, it was held unlikely that the city will follow such a request, as it has been freely reported that if the supervisors denied the permit an appeal would be taken to the courts.

Following their action, the supervisors received marked praise from Mrs. E. W. Stephens, president of the North Burlingame Women's Club; Mrs. H. B. Sprague, president of the Burlingame Woman's Club; Mrs. Ella Chase, secretary of the San Mateo County Taxpayers' Association, and Dr. F. W. Stapff of the Burlingame-San Mateo Flower and Garden Club.

The board also adopted an ordinance outlining the duties of the county health board and Dr. Harold E. Morrison, health director. Among the things provided are Dr. Morrison's attendance at every meeting of the health board and a report by him every month on his activities as director.

Sheriff James J. McGrath informed the board that he has arranged for day and night patrol of the coastside during the pea picking season, which is about to open. Supervisor Manuel Francis informed the board that the pea crop this year is a failure, and he is fearful of trouble because many of the workers expected to migrate there would be unable to secure work.

Supervisor John W. Poole received the support of the board in his plan to zone certain south end sections for weed control. He told the supervisors yellow thistle is spreading rapidly through the south end.

Agricultural Commissioner Max J. Leonard was authorized to employ a bee inspector to examine all hives in the county, with authority to confiscate those found diseased. Leonard said the survey will be started immediately.

Six Cities Select New Mayors

Six peninsula cities last Monday had new mayors, following organizations of city councils in twelve municipalities which held their biennial election the previous week. In Redwood City Charles Lambert was chosen to succeed former Mayor William Dusel. Other changes were: Burlingame, Allan F. Hunt to replace C. A. Buck; Menlo Park, James Cooper to succeed W. H. Weeden; Lawndale, C. J. Newell to succeed W. A. Newall; South San Francisco, Reese Lloyd to succeed Joseph Quinlan; Bayshore, John P. Larsen, newly elected.

Members of the Girl's Physical Education classes have played seven basketball games to the present date. Since Mrs. Songer has a ninth period, most of the refereeing, timekeeping and scorekeeping is done by the students. At present Club II has won most of the games, but may be defeated later on.

A Freshman skating party was held last evening by the members of the first year class. The affair was at Iceland, and those who went met at the top of the hill at 6:30 P. M.

READING THE HEART

By the California Medical Association.

Surprising as it may seem, until Shakespeare's day little or nothing was known of the functions of the heart. This is the more surprising in view of the certainty with which the modern physician reads the heart.

While there are various methods of testing the heart functions, one of the most interesting and accurate is the electrocardiograph.

It had long been known that any muscle under stimulus produces a minute electrical current. Taking advantage of this knowledge, the modern physician makes an electrocardiogram, which simply is a photographic chart of the electrical currents produced during the heart's movements.

Electrical contacts are applied to the limbs. The current of the heart action causes a fibre of quartz glass one six-hundreths of an inch in diameter to move in a beam of light, which is directed upon a moving photographic plate or film.

Experiments have shown that the heart did not contract and relax all at once, but that there was a definite sequence of stimulation. This began at the base of the heart, right auricle, and from there swept over both auricles to be collected into a small node or tissue, and was then conveyed through a conducting tissue to the ventricles.

It was found that certain definite time values obtained for all events in sequence, and that curves shown on the photograph presented definite normal types as well as abnormal ones.

It is now possible to obtain by this graphic method not only the orderliness of the events of the heart, but changes in the shape of the various waves in the curve point to definite defects in the heart. It is possible also to define the part of the heart responsible for many of the defects.

For example: The heart may show a single disorderly beat. The electrocardiograph shows that the beat develops from a certain part of the heart momentarily out of control. Again, the beats may continue to be in entire disorder, in which case will be revealed the nature and source of the trouble.

Strangely enough, two parts of the heart may beat independent of each other. The electrocardiograph will show that there is disorder in the conducting fibres between auricle and ventricle.

A blood vessel in the heart may become closed off, resulting in the death of part of the heart muscle. The electrocardiograph will reveal the nature and to some extent the location of the trouble and tell much of the prospects for recovery.

Amricans of today live at a swift pace. Common sense living, and prompt medical attention when it seems indicated, are the best safeguards against heart disease.

American Legion Auxiliary Promoting Child Welfare

The American Legion Auxiliary in promoting the Child Welfare program is vitally interested in the public schools. Next week being Public Schools Week, Daly City Unit No. 410 urges that everyone visit the schools, talk with the teachers, and watch the children work, in order to more clearly understand the present day system of education. On Wednesday evening, April 25, there will be a program given at the Jefferson Union High School at 8 P. M. Be sure to attend this affair.

That we may help the children who are orphaned, crippled, undernourished, or otherwise handicapped, Daly City Unit No. 410 will hold a big benefit whist at the Legion Hall on Monday evening, April 30. A large portion of the proceeds will be used locally. We ask the co-operation and support of the public on this occasion. We assure you a pleasant evening. Play off at 8:30 P. M.

Several members attended the San Mateo County Council of the American Legion Auxiliary held in Belmont last Friday evening. Plans are being made to hold a monster card party soon to help purchase uniforms for the County Drill Team. The time and place will be announced later. The next council meeting will be held in San Bruno Legion Hall on Monday evening, May 7.

The regular meeting of the Eighth District will be held next Tuesday evening, April 24, in Guild Hall of the Presbyterian Church on Santa Cruz avenue in Menlo Park.

The national organization of the American Legion Auxiliary, in carrying on Child Welfare and Community Service, is holding a nation-wide jelly campaign. This contest opens April 15 and is to continue through the seasons to October 1st. It is hoped to have 1,000,000 glasses of jelly available for distribution through the local units. Each unit is asked to make 100 glasses.

Daly City unit has already started in this interesting work. Mrs. Helena Orr, a very earnest worker in the unit, has made and donated the first gift, one dozen glasses of orange marmalade. Many more glasses will soon be ready.

The members will meet at the home of Mrs. Gladys Riordan next Monday afternoon for sewing. G. J. H.

Wines to Get Fair Awards

The California state fair board, for the first time in seventeen years, has approved a premium list for California wines. Directors of the fair have voted premiums totaling $575, divided into five prizes for the counties making the most distinctive exhibits of California wines and brandies. Gold and silver medals are also provided for exhibitors of dry, sweet and sparkling wines and brandies.

ROYCE'S SPORTS WIN BALL GAME

By ED. CAVAGNERO

The Royce's Sports Shop team, composed of former Jefferson high school stars, together with former players of the Eagles' team, played their second baseball game last Sunday on the Seventh and Harrison diamond, before a banner crowd, with many of our local fans to cheer them on to victory.

The boys played high class baseball to defeat the Fredericksburg Beer team, formerly the Langendorff Royals, 8 to 2. Creighton Davies, local youngster, twirled sensational ball, allowing but four scattered hits. Bob Preston, pitcher for the Beer boys, did not fare so well, the Sports Shop boys, after threatening in the second and third innings, rallying to score six hits and six runs in the fifth inning. Babe Pierotti, with three hits, Jay Walsh with two, one a triple, and Maloney with two hits, lead the attack. The work of both teams on the field featured the game. Just look over the box score, you Daly Citv fans, and judge for yourselves if these boys don't make a pretty snappy ball club. With the little giant, S. Hawley, and Ed. Cavagnaro as their leaders, games will be played with city and county teams throughout the summer season.

Royce's Sports will play the Tiburon team at Tiburon on Sunday, April 22.

"Oh, Neal! Oh, how lovely! Oh—"

"You can't afford it!" finished Neal mockingly, "of course I can! A man can't afford not to give presents to his wife every now and then. Besides, you're not to worry, it is all paid for. I had an unexpected check today—an account long overdue paid up. I attended to all our monthly bills, bang up, just like that! And still I had enough left over for this, too!"

The pendant was pretty with the "glittery" dress. In fact it was perfect. And as Anne, followed by Neal, swept into the Lassiter drawing room while the butler beside the silk portiered entrance announced, "Senator and Mrs. Conrad" both were swiftly conscious of the fact that Anne was unsurpassed in elegance by any other woman present. Senator Lassiter, who was talking with the French ambassadress, detached himself immediately from her side, and hastened forward; while his mother, with less empressement but with equal cordiality, turned to greet them also.

"We are so very happy to have you with us—now let me see. I wish to be sure you meet every one here tonight. Have you met the Italian ambassador and Donna Martinelli? Madame Estavi is a friend already, I am sure—the speaker of the house and Mrs. Hastings, Senator and Mrs. Lee, Senator and Mrs. Stone."

The even, cultured voice flowed on. Two servants in purple livery entered, bearing silver trays, laden with frosty cocktails, and tiny savory sandwiches. Senator Lassiter offered his arm to the ambassadress, and advanced, with her beside him, at the head of the procession which wound its way to the strains of music from an unseen organ through a second great drawing room, across a galleried hall, and into a long, paneled dining room flanked with great carved sideboards.

Anne, feeling as if she had been transplanted to one of Monte Cristo's banquets, hoped that she was successfully concealing the swimming sensation which almost overcame her as she seated herself between Senator Stone and Senor Estavi at the very end of the splendid table. She must, it seemed, reorganize her ideas about entertaining as completely as she had reorganized them about dress. But she resolved to do so swiftly and completely; and rousing herself, she heard the small black-bearded man with indefinable charm and distinction who was placed at her left asking hopefully, "Vous-parlez-francais, Madame?"

"Mais, oui," she answered breathlessly, her head clearing instantly, and launching into her newly acquired but fluent French she began to chatter pleasantly with the agreeable little Peruvian.

Senator Lassiter, appearing at her side apparently from nowhere in an incredibly short time after she had finished her coffee, in the drawing room, assured her that she would be much more comfortable on a deep brocaded sofa at the front end of the room than in the small high chair on which she was then sitting; and shepherded her suavely and inconspicuously to a place a little apart from the other guests.

"How I wish," he murmured, throwing his handsome head back a little and speaking through half-closed lips "that once, just once, I could take a young and pretty woman out to dinner! But it is always my fate to have middle-aged, not to say elderly, ambassadresses at my side—it is unthinkable that any man should indulge in airy persiflage with dowagers of rank!"

"Because they would resent it as an impertinence? or because they offer no inducement to levity and indiscretion?" asked Anne, who was beginning to enjoy herself again.

"Both, my dear lady. You have no idea how virtuous I am when there is nothing about to tempt me. But in the presence of lovely young matrons with perfect complexions and a gift of repartee I sometimes forget myself."

"But they, I suppose, always jog your memory?" said Anne demurely.

"Oh, no—not always. Sometimes they are forgetful too—How's your memory?' he inquired with a slight drawl.

"Excellent," said Anne, with emphasis.

But Senator Lassiter did not seem to be daunted; and when a little later she told him that she thought perhaps she and Neal should be leaving, he informed her, with even more of a drawl, that they could not go until after the guests of honor had departed.

"But they will go," he said, "exactly on the tick of ten-thirty. That is the law of the Medes and Persians. The worst of it is, that after that you will be free to go, too; you will no doubt take advantage of your freedom; and I do not feel at all sure when I shall see you again."

"Neal and I have been asked to another dinner," said Anne. "In honor of the Hammels. The Standishes are giving it. I think it is most awfully kind of them to invite us. But what I started to say was—perhaps you will be there and I might meet you then."

"I see," said Lassiter, suddenly grave. "Thank you. I shall be there."

Anne had the sudden, uncomfortable feeling that she had made an appointment with him. With his usual intuition he guessed this, and with his usual smooth skillfulness restored her composure.

"And at many other festivities which you will attend," he said casually. "We are certain to move in interlocking circles, if not actually the same one, as I rather suspect may be the case. I hope you dance? I shall permit myself to look for you at the children's hospital ball."

He bowed slightly, in kind and superficial tribute. Near them a gilt clock chimed softly and struck the half hour. The ambassadress, who was favoring Neal with a few formal remarks, instantly extended her hand in farewell, and sought the ambassador with her eye.

"What did I tell you!" laughed Lassiter softly. "Good-by—dear Lady Delight."

CHAPTER XI

Luncheons, teas, dinners, calls. Official receptions, charity balls, evening musicals, calls. Tuesday noons at the senate office building, Friday afternoons at the Congressional club. Calls. Calls. Calls.

Anne had been swept breathlessly, into the swing of it, almost before she realized what had happened. She grew very thin and she slept badly. Her beauty took on a slightly haggard quality, and there were dark circles under her eyes, fainter color in her cheeks; but what she lost in freshness she gained, subtly, in sophistication and distinction.

And she loved it all: the overlapping engagements, the stiff, square, creased envelopes delivered by hand, the clanging telephone, the long cardboard flower boxes with their contents shrouded in moist oiled paper and tiny cards tucked in their corners, the cool home-comings when she left a heated ballroom just before dawn and felt the fresh breeze in her face as Horace drove her swiftly up New Hampshire avenue.

Anne was progressing with a rapidity which was sufficiently rare to be remarkable even in that capacity where so many others have been tested, and have proven beyond any possible question the fine adaptability of the fine American woman.

Nothing perhaps was more indicative of her advance in savoir-faire than the difference in the degree of composure with which she approached the White House. When she first drove under its white-pillared portecochere to deposit her card and Neal's on the small silver salver extended to her by the manservant in livery her fingers trembled so that she could hardly lay down the neatly folded bits of cardboard. The deference which doth "hedge in a king" and which—deny it though we may—seems to many of us to hedge in a President also, rose before her in all its grandeur, terrifying her with its significance. Her sense of awe persisted all the afternoon; and when Mrs. Hammel told her she should follow up this ceremony of card leaving, after a little interval, with a note to Miss Hopkinson, Mrs. Shaw's secretary, requesting to be received by the President's wife, her reluctance to take this bold step was as evident in her face as it was in her voice.

"Why, Mrs. Hammel, I couldn't! Surely I ought to wait for her to make the suggestion, if such a suggestion is ever to be made!"

"Certainly you ought not! Do you imagine that Mrs. Shaw spends her leisure moments glancing through the cards that are showered upon her and deciding whom to favor with an invitation? She never sees those cards. She has no leisure moments. But Miss Hopkinson, the grim old dragon—and a pretty good sort, too, when you get to know her!—has you all neatly docketed and knows whether you have done right by our Nell, and all that. So run along home, Goldilocks, and get your note written!"

Summer Velvets for Day, Evening

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THERE is big news in the fabric world — summer velvets! And when we say summer velvets we mean real summer velvets, not to be confused with the lightweight velvets such as are always used for wraps, trimmings and accessories in the summer.

These summer velvets are new, so new they are being shown for the first time. Already the fame of these made-in-America velvets has spread among leading style creators, both in London and Paris, who are fashioning some of their most fetching summer apparel of these fascinating weaves.

It's the new washable velvets which perhaps bring the greatest thrill. No, your eyes have not deceived you, you are reading about velvets which actually wash, and perfectly at that. These exquisite washable velvet weaves make one marvel at the miracles which science and chemistry and artistry combined are working in the fabric realm in this Twentieth century era of progress. A velvet as beautiful as fancy can picture in a variety of designful weaves and delectable colors, which tubs as easily and satisfactorily as your linens and muslins is well worth thinking about. It is a real achievement.

For resort or cruise or country wear we can think of no more practical, at the same time lovely, evening gown than one of shell pink crinkle washable velvet such as a prominent French designer includes in her summer collection. If you prefer other than pink there is a whole range of beguiling tones and tints in these crinkle wash velvets from which to make choice.

One of the latest innovations is a cotton velvet woven on a cotton loom. It also is washable. It comes in several clever patternings, polka-dotted effects on a sheer self-colored background being conspicuously smart at this time when the dotted theme is so voguish. The pale chartreuse green summer velvet which fashions the gracefully ruffled informal dinner frock posed in the foreground of the illustration is a sheer, fine cotton with self-colored dots. The wide velvet ribbon sash in a delicate orange tone completes a breath-taking color scheme of springtime loveliness. Orchids and gardenias form the corsage, for the fashion of wearing natural flowers has been revived.

For sportswear there is nothing smarter in the way of the new summer velvets than a corded weave which is printed in multi-colored Mexican stripes. See the swagger coat made of it, as illustrated to the right in the group. The silk scarf repeats the bright green of one of the stripes. In this same category of summer sports velvets another effect registers which is very striking in two-tone stripes, brown with pink beige being especially attractive.

A wonderful new summer velvet done in a tweedy herring bone weave has just the right look for travel and town wear. The tremendously good-looking coat to the left in the picture is made of this type of velvet. Its "classy" shirtwaist styling and its huge brown buttons give it distinction.

KNIT FABRICS NOW LOOK LIKE TWEEDS

Fashion dotes on confusing us by bringing out wools that look like silk, cottons that look like wool, and synthetic fabrics that look like a little bit of both.

Then, just when we think we can write authoritatively about the new fabrics, she raises the question "Who said knits couldn't look like tweeds?"

Anny Blatt, Paris designer of knitwear, answers the question in handknit town clothes that feature diagonal stripes of dark, soft green wool yarn and white cotton.

And in New York Emmy Wylie receives fashion recognition as the newest American designer (there are likely to be others before we go to press—they're springing up all around) who handles the tried and true yarns with a light touch.

Her collection is well worth seeing and includes models priced at $22.75 to $39.75. You will like a tweed mixture called "Frostknit." Citron is a grand color that borders on antique gold, smart with navy contrast.

Bathing Suits in Taffeta Like Costumes for Ballet

Taffeta bathing suits that look more like ballet costumes than swimming outfits will doubtless dot our more fashionable beaches next summer—the fad has already started in Paris with folks who have nothing else to do, have gone south to stretch and leave the world to go to pot if it wants to. These taffeta "beach jewels" as one house names them (because of their brilliant coloring) are equipped with taffeta tights and the whole ensemble is waterproof so that when you come out of the wavelets you are as crisp and unwilted as when you went in.

In Full Sail

Warp-print taffetas are being used extensively for evening wear. They lend themselves particularly well to the newest of all silhouettes—the "ship in full sail."

VERY SMART LINEN

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Linen is playing a stellar role on the stage of fashion. Here is an ensemble done in fine Irish linen which is modish and practical for spectator sports. The beauty of this outfit is that it can be converted into a costume for active participation if occasion requires. The suit, with its smart brown and white checked swagger coat of tweedy linen, is appropriate for the clubhouse porch or the street, combined either with brown or beige accessories. Removing the coat a slim sleeveless dress is revealed of unerushable Irish linen ready for a set of tennis or a round of golf. The beige gloves which this youthful sportswoman wears are crocheted of knitting and crochet cotton in a mesh design. They are cool and easy to make.

THE HEN-MAN

By R. H. WILKINSON

©, Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

THERE exists in America a certain type of person who, born and raised in a city apartment, possesses what is known in the vernacular as a yen to own a small place in the country, firmly believing that he can buy a few chickens, raise a few vegetables and live there, commuting to and from his metropolitan job, for about one-third the cost of existence in his city apartment.

This is a splendid idea, especially that part about living one-third as cheaply as in the city.

It has its other advantages, too.

There is, for example, the matter of fresh air, fresh dairy products, plenty of space to move around in, freedom from the hustle and bustle of city life.

It's a pity that the plan hasn't, can't and never will be developed profitably.

I mean the moving-to-the-country bug.

Steve Bolton was attacked by the bug.

Steve had become fed up on city life.

He was a bachelor, young and handsome, and was forever chasing about from party to tea to dinner, to theater, or any other of the dozen places where handsome and eligible young bachelors are welcomed.

Steve was fed up.

He wanted a breath of fresh air; wanted to get up with the sun, drink in the crisp morning air, tend to the chickens and catch the 7:50 train to town and his broker's office.

He wanted to spend his evenings seated comfortably before a cozy fire, get in some good reading, go to bed at nine o'clock and sleep the sleep of the just.

Also, he wanted to economize.

The cost of living in town wasn't giving Steve much of an opportunity to save for rainy days.

* * *

This plan of Steve's was swell. Too bad it couldn't work.

Steve talked the idea over with Jim McDevitt.

Jim had tried the same thing once, but for some unknown reason was back in his city apartment.

Jim approved of Steve's idea without a moment's hesitation.

"Great scheme. You'll like it, Steve, out there. Fine way to live. Fact is, I'll have the missus buy her eggs from you. You can bring them in every morning. Help you get started."

Steve's dreams soared.

He pictured himself laying aside a tidy sum from the profits on his eggs.

Good scout, Jim.

Steve also called on Rus Whitcomb. Rus and his wife had tried the living-in-the-country idea, too.

And Rus, like Jim, approved and applauded.

Sure, he'd buy all the eggs Steve could raise.

Fresh eggs from the country! Boy, nothing could be better.

Later that same night Jim McDevitt called Rus Whitcomb on the telephone and the two of them held a gleeful conversation.

So old Steve had got the bug, eh?

Well, let him find out for himself.

Won't do him any harm to get stung.

He'd never rest till he got the craving out of his system anyhow.

Besides, it was comforting to know there were other fish grabbing at that same live-cheaply-in-the-country bait.

* * *

On the following Sunday, Steve chartered a drive-your-own car and motored out in the country.

Along toward mid-afternoon he chanced upon a little place in the town of Medvale that seemed to suit his exact purpose.

There was a white house with green blinds and a picket fence around the front lawn, in which a half dozen shade trees reared themselves.

Behind the house there was a barn, several outbuildings and a rather large henery.

The place was not more than a 15-minute walk from the railroad station, yet its remoteness from the traveled highway was far enough to make it ideal.

Steve hunted up the owner and was astonished and delighted to discover the place could be rented for less than one-half of what he was paying at his present apartment.

He sewed the thing up at once by making a substantial deposit and signing a six months' lease.

A month later Steve was established in his new abode and tremendously happy.

Two dozen Rhode Island Red chickens clucked contentedly in the henery.

Wood was stacked ceiling high in the barn.

Shrubs had begun to flower and the shade trees were bursting forth their buds.

Ah, yes, Steve was far happier than he ever dreamed he could be.

He was going to bed early, getting up early, reading a lot and learning a good deal about the hen business.

* * *

After the first week Steve carried with him each morning a half dozen nice fresh eggs and proudly handed them to Jim and Rus when he reached the office.

Jim and Rus received them solemnly and praised him highly for his success and winked broadly behind his back.

Along about the first of May, Steve's hens, or most of them, stopped laying.

After failing to solve the mystery himself, he consulted a neighbor and was told that the biddies were at this time of year usually interested in raising a family.

Steve thought this was great. He went home, gathered together all his spare eggs and put five of his hens to set.

The others he locked up in a barren anteroom to "break up" their family raising notions.

At the end of two weeks eight of the three dozen eggs Steve had set, hatched.

The young man was jubilant.

He proudly summoned his neighbor, to display the result of his breeding efforts, and was told that five of the eight chicks were roosters, which wasn't so good.

* * *

It was about this time that monthly bills began to arrive at the hen farm, and after an evening spent in intensive figuring Steve discovered that the cost of electric lights, cooking gas, telephone and other incidentals of livelihood was quite as much, if not more, than the cost of the same conveniences in town.

It was two days after this that Steve learned, much to his disappointment, that the "fresh" cream, milk and butter which he had been having left at his door each morning were shipped out of Boston on the night previous and distributed in the country by a chain dairy products company.

Augmenting these startling revelations, Steve came to the conclusion that getting up with the sun every morning wasn't such a swell idea, especially if it happened to be a rainy day or if the air wasn't bracing because of the humidity.

He found also that the long, quiet evenings were more or less palling once you got used to them, and that a month of reading had brought him up to date on current literature.

In fact, Steve began to know a longing for a fling at city life, for an evening at a night club or trip to the theater or a gay dinner party.

* * *

Startlingly, he discovered that, after all, farming was a business, and unless you devoted your entire time to it, it was pretty difficult to make it pay.

Which, incidentally, when you look at the thing squarely, is quite true of almost any business.

To add to all this, Steve one day awoke to the fact that Jim and Rus, who had had their fling of commuting from the country, were giving him what is known as the merry ha, ha.

They had, in a manner of speaking, put up a job on him.

They wanted to see him get stung.

And when he finally admitted that this country idea was a lot of bilge they would be all set to enjoy the situation with crude and raucous guffaws.

This knowledge was disturbing. Steve's ears burned at thoughts of it.

And in the end he vowed to foil the instigators of the joke, and turn, if possible, the tables.

* * *

Thus minded, Steve on the day following brought as usual his half dozen fresh eggs to the conniving rascals who posed as friends and advisers, suggesting on delivery that, in view of the fact that eggs were scarce these days and because these from Medvale were strictly fresh, the recipients of the daily half dozen pay a little more than the amount asked at the corner delicatessen for less fresh hen fruit.

Jim and Russ agreed readily enough.

Of course, fresh eggs were worth more money.

What was more, they were eager and anxious to give Steve a helping hand.

A week later Steve moved back to his city apartment and with a great feeling of relief settled once more into the comfortable routine to which he was accustomed.

But each morning for six months thereafter he paused at the corner chain store en route to the office, purchased two one-half dozen boxes of eggs at 20 cents the half dozen, and later sold them to Jim and Rus for 30 cents.

Which explains why, in the early fall, when Jim and Rus, puzzled over Steve's continued success as a henman, motored one day to the little white house in Medvale (the same house, incidentally, which first one and then the other had occupied during their own venture in the egg-raising business) they discovered that Steve had quitted the place six months previous, and were prone not to guffaw when next they encountered the would-be hen-man, but merely to chuckle in good fellowship fashion and vow with him to warn all others against the live-in-the-country bug when it attacked friends and neighbors of the city.

Early Transatlantic Flights

The United States navy seaplane NC-4 was the first heavier-than-air craft to cross the Atlantic. This was in May, 1919. It left Rockaway, N. Y., with two companion seaplanes on May 8 and arrived at Lisbon, Portugal, on May 27. The trip was made with stops in Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and the Azores. The first airplane to cross the ocean in a single flight was a British Vickers-Vimy biplane, flown by Capt. John Alcock, pilot, and Lieut. Arthur W. Brown, navigator. It left St. John's, N. F., June 14, 1919, and landed early the following day at Clifton, Galway, Ireland. The British dirigible R-34 was the first of its class to cross the Atlantic. It left Scotland on July 2, 1919, reached Mineola, N. Y., via Newfoundland, on July 6, and returned by the same route from July 9 to 12.

NEED FEDERAL AID FOR SCHOOLS

Educators in every section of the nation are deeply concerned regarding the problem the schools of our country are facing.

A prominent educator says: "It was the hope of many that the schools would be able to struggle along pending the resumption of a prosperity which would make it possible for them to meet expenditures out of levies on local taxable property. This has become impossible. They must now look to the same sources for their very existence, in many places, that banks, railroads, insurance, agricultural and other agencies in our national economy have looked and obtained bountiful assistance.

"The Federal Government has been the one agency capable of commanding the tax revenues and the credit resquisite to save these interests from going to pot. It must now save public education or the gigantic, inflated, complex institutions of this age will not survive for the very want of trained men and women to manage them.

"Our educational institutions, both private and public, were barely supplying the scientific and executive needs of our great business institutions, our quasi-public corporations and municipal corporations, when the crisis came. The breakdown of education in many centers and the curtailment of education in others will reveal more ghastly tragedies in our social and financial structure, if not speedily corrected, that we have thus far experienced. Education has brought forth our unique age, only education can sustain and maintain it."

RADIO MAIL LISTS

Many radio fans are wondering what has caused such a great increase in their circular mail, ccording to a business men's magazine, which goes on to explain the matter.

Some announcers make lists of radio listeners who write in to their stations with requests for certain pieces to be played, or send for booklets, souvenirs or advertising matter. These lists are then sold, it is claimed, to dealers in radio equipment and parts, who are thus able to get in touch with these prospective customers.

As radio owners are generally of a class able to buy liberally, these lists are resold, it is charged, to dealers in all manners of merchandise as likely customers for their wares also. So the radio fan's name goes on and on, and finally graces many a "sucker list."

Sometimes genius takes the form of being able to cash in on other people's ideas.

JEFFERSON'S EPITAPH

The anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson, on April 13, revived many historical anecdotes of the third President of the United States, and serves to remind his countrymen of his brilliant service to the struggling young nation.

Jefferson's dominating trait was his love of liberty, and it was as a champion of human freedom that he desired to be known to posterity. This was illustrated by his epitaph, written by himself for inscrption upon his tomb: "Here is buried Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence; and of the statute of Virginia for religious freedom; and father of the University of Virginia."

No reference is made to his services as Governor of Virginia, member of Congress, Minister to France, Secretary of State, Vice-President and twice President of the United States. In his own estimation his services in the cause of liberty stood above all these.

Freedom of government, freedom of education were the paramount objectives of his life, as epitomized in his epitaph. Born an aristocrat, Thomas Jefferson became the ardent defender of the masses, and the greatest exponent of human liberty the world has ever known.

A NEW ANESTHETIC

Baltimore surgeons were delighted a few days ago with the results obtained through the use of a new anesthetic called evipan. It is administered by means of a hypodermic needle.

According to the report, a patient about to undergo a serious operation was given an injection of evipan, introduced into a vein in the bend of his elbow. He was entirely unconscious in twenty seconds. Six minutes after the operation was completed he regained consciousness and got off the operating table by himself. After drinking a glass of water he called for "a good big breakfast."

The new anesthetic seems highly desirable to use, because of its speedy effects and the fact that it does not cause nausea when the patient revives, as ether usually does. Evipan is a German invention, and will be manufactured by a New York chemical company. Extensive tests will be made, however, before it is placed on the market. If it proves as efficacious as the Baltimore report indicates it to be, it will be a boon to millions of sufferers.

KNOWING AND DOING

It is mighty fine to know a lot, but it is even better to be able to do things. Many persons who have at their command a considerable assortment of information are unable to put it to very much practical use.

This was neatly illustrated in a sort of "confession" article by a teacher, in the Journal of the National Educational Association. She said:

"I san solve a quadratic equation, but I cannot keep my bank account straight.

"I can name the Kings of England since the War of Roses, but I do not know the qualifications of the candidates at the coming election.

"I know the economic theories of Malthus and Adam Smith, but I cannot live within my income.

"I can explain the principles of hydraulics, but I cannot fix a leak in the kitchen faucet.

"I have studied the psychology of James and Titchener, but I cannot control my temper.

"I can conjugate Latin verbs, but I cannot write legibly."

While this picture may be somewhat overdrawn, it serves to illustrate the futility of much that passes for education, when its acquisition is not accompanied by training which leads to its useful employment in every day life.

Just think of what Lincoln's parents might have made of him if they had been up on child psychology.

"Its price is so small and its value is so great that it simply doesn't pay to be without it"

Saving strength is not a luxury. It's the thrifty thing to do, in household or business.

An old subscriber tells us, who discontinued her telephone in recent months and now is ordering her service restored, "I found that my telephone saved strength and time more than I had ever dreamed, and more nickels, dimes and quarters than its monthly service costs."

Nothing does so much for so little as your telephone.

TRIBUTE TO IRVING

Recently a tablet to mark the birthplace of Washington Irving, in New York City, was dedicated, and plans for a $30,000 memorial to be erected at Irvington-on-Hudson, where he is buried in Sleepy Hollow cemetery, were disclosed.

Irving was born in 1783, and in his boyhood gave little indication of the great talent which he afterwards employed with such marked success. In fact, it is recorded that while his two brothers were permitted to enter college, he was not considered promising enough to warrant the expense of such a course.

He does not appear to have been particularly industrious, but spent much time in excursions along the Hudson and in general reading, although he studied in a law office and was finally admitted to the bar. He traveled in Europe for two years, his observations, combined with his already acquired knowledge of American lore, giving him a rich store of material for his literary work.

After some early writing with indifferent success, his "History of New York by Diedrick Knickerbocker" appeared in 1809, and placed him in the position of the first American to win international fame solely as a man of letters, its quaint humor and felicitous style winning instant acclaim on both sides of the Atlantic.

His subsequent works were almost uniformly successful, and covered a wide range, including history and biography, as well as many unusual tales of rare charm. The death of Matilda Hoffman, a sweetheart of Irving's youth, cast a shadow over his life and he never married. He died at the age of 76.

Auto Recovery Affects Ten Million Workers

Accrediting the automobile industry with "leading general business on its drive back to health," a survey by Dun and Bradstreet just issued states: "The recovery of the industry has affected the economic condition of 10,000,000 workers and twenty or more leading industries." Classifying motor cars, like food and clothing, as a necessity product for the American people, the report says: 'No sooner did the decided upturn in business appear, with its spread of national purchasing power, than the industry revived abruptly from the worst slump in its history. With 1934 production estimated at 3,500,000 to 4,000,000 units, an increase of 72 to 97 percent over the 1933 total, notwithstanding many companies were enabled to make profits during the last half of 1933, profits this year are expected to give a semblance to those in the late twenties. This will be achieved despite higher costs of labor and materials and the enormous outlays necessitated by changed models as operating expenditures have been brought to a degree of control." Sales for March, estimated in Detroit at 175,000, gained 86 per cent over February and 144 per cent over March, 1933.

'Phone Gain of 75,000 Against 340,000 Loss

Telephone installation has proved to be a dependable barometer in judging the progress of recovery. Figures of installations for March are not yet available, but estimates of the Bell System, show they run ahead of February, for which the figures were 25,000, as against slightly under 20,000 for January of this year. The first quarter is expected to show a gain of approximately 75,000, contrasted with a net loss of 340,000 stations during the first quarter of 1933, or an average monthly loss of 114,000.

N. D. A. Causes Much Grief

In fact, serious danger may follow if it is not stopped. N. D. A. (Nocturnal Disturbance Act) or bladder irregularity at night, can be relieved by flushing out the impurities and excess acids which cause the irritation that wakes you up. Make this 25 cent test. Get a box of Bukets, the bladder laxative. They contain buchu leaves, juniper oil, etc., and work on the bladder similar to castor oil on the bowels. After four days if not satisfied, go back and get your 25 cents. If bothered by burning, leg pains, backache, frequent desire, you are bound to feel better after this flushing and you get your regular sleep. BUKETS are guaranteed by McGraw's Pharmacy. —Adv.

Industrial Codes Means of Conserving Resources

That industrial codes of fair competition afford the means for conserving the Nation's natural resources was a hope held out by President Roosevelt when he signed the National Industrial Recovery Act, which has been realized. As child labor in cotton mills "went out like a flash" with the President's signature of the code for the cotton textile industry, so the 30-year campaign to preserve the forests on 400,000,000 acres of privately owned lands was accomplished with his approval of amendments to the code for the lumber and timber products industry. Publicly owned timber is confined to about 150,000,000 acres, most of it lying within the national forests.

Conservationists assert that the program embodied in the lumber code amendments accomplishes what they have fostered since the turn of the century. It is effective June 1, 1934, and provides rigid rules for private operators in protection against fires and other destructive agencies and preservation of young growth during and following logging, which shall be selective; co-operation of forest-owning groups with public authorities in extending systematic protection; methods of restocking after cutting and sustained-yield forest management. The hearings on the amendments revealed that, despite widespread sentiment within the industry in favor of forest conservation, divergent interests were never able to agreed upon details. "June 1," read a statement issued by the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, "will be a red-letter day in American industrial history, because it will mark the beginning of sustained treatment of 400,000,000 acres of land."

In declaring that "the oil industry was the first to show the benefit of operation under a NRA code," the T. S. Hose review of petroleum conditions says: "Under Government control the industry has been able to achieve results that even the largest companies could not bring about. The big units were unable to prevent the 'racketeer' from wrecking the price structure. Now it is generally recognized that placing production under control has not ouly maintained a better price structure and renewed employment but also has prevented the sapping of the fields. Without the strong hand of regulation, the oil fields of Europe have continued to flow and have exhausted their potentialities to the point where they are no longer a serious competitive factor with those of the United States."

Thus the very interests which have been depleting the country's natural resources are enabled to conserve them under the governmental control provided for in the lumber and petroleum codes.

Should at Once Turn in Your C. W. A. Vouchers

A request for publicity has come from Captain Edward Macauley, Federal Civil Works Administrator in San Francisco, and the State Auditor, W. M. Sanborn, which this paper is glad to comply with. Many vouchers for C. W. A. work have not been turned in. Will every person in this county having such vouchers turn them in immediately to the local director? This will enable the state administration to close its books and will thereby release money for local circulation, a most important factor in present economic conditions.

Put these vouchers in the hands of the local directors by April 23, and do not send them to the San Francisco head office.

It must be understood this request does not apply to vouchers rendered but which have not been paid. The latter are being put through as rapidly as is humanly possible, taking into consideration government red tape. More than 50,000 payrolls covering up to February 8 have been audited. The total will approximate 80,000.

WILL ROGERS COMING IN PERSON TO CURRAN THEATRE

When Will Rogers makes his first appearance in a legitimate stage play at the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, starting Monday evening, April 30, he will be surrounded by an excellent supporting cast of players. His vehicle, too, will be of note. It is Eugene O'Neill's first comedy, "Ah, Wilderness," which is still playing to capacity business on Broadway, where it is now in its tenth month.

Among the more prominent players to appear in support of Will Rogers will be Charlotte Henry, the young Miss who created such a sensation as Alice in the film version of "Alice in Wonderland;" William Janney, who has won fame both on the stage and screen; Anne Shoemaker, a Broadway actress of note; Jay Ward, who also has had many laudatory comments on his stage and screen work; Helen Flint, Ralph M. Remley, Anne O'Neill, Martha Mayo, John H. Dilson, Hal Price, Clyde Dilson and several others of like caliber.

Tickets will go on sale at the Curran box office on Tuesday morning, April 24. Mail orders are now being received.

PARK AREAS ATTRACT MOTORING TOURISTS

Motor travel to national park areas, particularly those situated in the western states, showed a marked increase last year, indicating that these publicly-owned recreation spots are becoming more widely appreciated by the motoring public, according to John R. Graham, of Merced, president of the California State Automobile Association. Anticipating that this travel will increase still further this year, the touring bureau of the motorists' organization is preparing for an unusual number of routings to the parks, Graham said.

These plans are in accord with a program announced at Washington for a continuance of efforts to bring about a more general knowledge and enjoyment of the attractions offered by the National Parks to the recreation seeker.

"While the National Parks of the west and the newer parks in the east have attracted a large number of visitors each year," Graham continued, "the fact remains that the great majority of motorists have yet to see and enjoy these great reserves which they own in common with all the people of the United States.

"In addition to being outstanding touring objectives, embracing world famous scenic beauties and a variety of natural wonders, many of these parks are located adjacent to or within easy travel distance of other great summer touring areas.

"This is particularly true in California, which is especially favored by having four great National Parks within its borders—Yosemite, Lassen Volcanic, Sequoia, and General Grant National Parks. All of these parks are conveniently accessible by automobile over excellent roads.

"Thus it is easily possible for California motorists and for visiting motorists from other states to include a visit to at least one of these parks in their summer vacation tours."

After staying aloft in a balloon for twenty-seven hours and forty-five minutes, breaking the former record of twenty-three hours and twenty-eight minutes, two Polish balloonists, Janusz and Warzak, may not be able to gain official credit for their feat. They had neglected to have the flight supervised by the Polish Aero Club, which must certify to records made in that country before they are recognized as official.

British film interests have decided to present Shakespearean plays in the talkies.

Even If It Hurts Better Add "Nerts"

Chicago.—Take it from Sir William Craigie, University of Chicago professor, and one of the world's foremost dictionary makers, slang is the stuff.

"It's up to you" to "believe it or not," he says, and these two expressions are real contributions to the language which convey exactly what they mean.

You may be "small potatoes," or able to toss the "bunk," but just as long as you earn the "simoleons" to get a "square meal" you can usually get out of a "tight place," and other such expressions are approved by the professor.

Six words are most commonly used, Sir William says, and they are: "A," "an," "the" and "to be."

OLD COOK BOOKS STAGE COMEBACK

Low Price of Butter and Eggs Is Incentive.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THE other day I had dinner with one of my older friends who has always been famous for her cooking She was rejoicing in the reduction of the prices of butter and eggs, which she said allowed her to use them generously without her conscience bothering her for extravagance. "This is the first pound cake I have made in years," she said, as she offered me delicate slices of this delectable cake, flavored with brandy.

Perhaps one of the greatest differences between old cook books and modern books is the difference in the number of eggs and the amount of butter in the recipe. I have before me a book published in 1845 in Philadelphia by Elizabeth Acton, a famous English woman. It was adopted to meet conditions in this country by an American housewife. The directions are exceedingly clear and it is ahead of its time in many respects. Naturally, eggs and butter are used liberally For what Miss Acton calls "common baked custard," she uses eight eggs to a quart of milk. For a "richer baked custard," she calls for ten eggs and half a pint of cream as well as a pint and a half of milk. For a french custard, twelve egg yolks and equal parts of milk and cream.

I find that a recipe for pound cake in 1845 is exactly like the accepted recipe of today—white cake uses a large number of eggs and the flavoring of vanilla beans must be pounded. Of course, there is no mention of baking powder which is a modern invention and therefore more eggs were necessary. Recipes for sponge cake are practically the same as modern recipes, although we do not find it necessary with modern egg-beaters to "whisk" the eggs thirty minutes as described. "It is a mistake to suppose that they cannot be too long beaten, as after they are brought to a state of perfect firmness they are injured by a continuation of the whisking and will at times curdle, or render a cake heavy from this cause." No recipe for angel food is to be found in this or in other books of this date.

Eggs and butter are valued as much for their contribution to sauces both for a pudding and for unsweetened foods, such as meat, fruits and vegetables.

At this time of year we like Hollandaise with asparagus, and with cauliflower and brocolli throughout the year. I am giving you a variation in the usual method of making this sauce today. This makes it go a little farther and is not quite so rich.

The most delicious of sauces for puddings also depend upon butter and eggs. For a "common" sauce, says Miss Acton, "sweeten a quarter pint of good melted butter with an ounce and a half of sugar, and add to it gradually a couple of glasses of wine; stir it until it is at the point of boiling, and serve it immediately. Lemon grate, or nutmeg, can be added at pleasure."

Angel Food Cake.

1 cup sifted cake flour
1 cup egg whites (8 to 10 eggs)
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon cream of tartar
1¼ cups sifted fine granulated sugar
¾ teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon almond extract

Sift flour once, measure, and sift four times. Beat egg whites and salt, when foamy, add cream of tartar. Continue beating until eggs are stiff enough to hold up in peaks. Fold in sugar, two tablespoons at a time. Fold in flour the same way, then flavoring. Pour batter into ungreased angel food pan and bake at least one hour in very slow oven, 275 degrees F. After thirty minutes increase heat slightly, 325 degrees F. Remove from oven and invert pan for one hour, or until cold.

White Cake.

2 cups sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup butter or other shortening
3 egg whites, beaten light
1 cup sifted sugar
¾ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Prepare pan. Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, and sift again. Cream shortening thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until fluffy. Add sifted flour and baking powder to creamed mixture, alternately with milk in three installments. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla; fold in egg whites. Bake in layers in moderate oven twenty to twenty-five minutes, 375 degrees F.

Pound Cake.

1 pound butter
1 pound sugar
10 eggs
1 pound flour
2 tablespoons brandy

Cream butter, add sugar gradually and beat until fluffy. Add egg yolks beaten until thick. Fold in egg whites beaten until stiff, flour and flavoring. Beat three minutes. Bake in deep pan one and one-fourth hours in slow oven. 300 degrees F. Cover with paper last half hour to prevent browning too much.

Strawberry Sauce.

1 cup powdered sugar
1 cup strawberries
⅓ cup butter

Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually, then the strawberries and beat until very light.

Ex-Master's Hog Call Is Irresistible to Sow

Billings, Mont.—"Her master's voice" proved irresistible to a hog near here. It happened like this:

Three years ago Farmer George L. Anderson of Lake Basin purchased the sow from "Dad" Hoerr of Billings.

A few days ago Hoerr entered a hog-calling contest over a local radio station. He stood before the microphone and trumpeted, "S-o-o-ey, s-o-o-oe-y, so-so-so-soey."

Suddenly there was a commotion in the Anderson farmyard. A sow rammed through a fence and, followed by all her litter, waddled toward the radio in the farmhouse. Only the timely intervention of Anderson saved his household from invasion.

Fat meat, though very nourishing, is often objected to by children. In such a case, try giving it to them in this way: Cut off the fat before the joint is cooked, chop or mince it finely, mix with double the weight of flour, make into a paste with cold water, form into balls, and boil for one hour. Served with either gravy or jam; this is delicious and children will generally eat it readily.

• • •

To clean a griddle that has become crusted, put over a very hot fire and cover thickly with salt. After the salt has burned brown, the crust and salt will brush off together, leaving the griddle like new. After washing the griddle, grease well and heat before putting away.

Always wash eggs before putting them in the refrigerator.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

Rambling around this great city day and night, week in and week out, with nothing more untoward happening than might occur on any Main street, one may get an idea that much of that which has been said or written concerning the perils of the unwary in New York may be exaggeration or mere imagination. Possibly anyone who attends to his own business and doesn't take any unnecessary chances is just as safe in the metropolis as in a hamlet. On the other hand, there was that experience of a close friend who just now is convalescing after having been involved in a situation, which arose solely because he had been working too hard and too many hours. Yet he suffered the loss of $18 in cash, both eyes were blacked, his ear and chin were cut, a small bone in his hand was broken, his suit ruined and his hat lost. Yet he was fortunate at that, since he might easily have lost his life.

• • •

City wise is the gentleman involved. He's a resident of New York of a number of years standing. Before moving here, he lived in Chicago, and at that time Chicago was far from being a village aroused only by the arrival of No. 7. During the war, he served in the Army Intelligence department and has arrested criminals to whom the taking of life was merely a part of the night's work. Recently, he did some special work for a client which necessitated long and hard hours. In fact, the night before he met his client in a final conference at a hotel near Grand Central, he had not slept at all. Hence when, the business finally concluded, he stepped out and hailed a taxicab, he was so weary that he fell asleep very soon after giving the driver his home address.

• • •

He was awakened by the driver saying to him, "Here you are." Still deep in the clutches of sleep, he stepped out of the cab and fumbled for his fare. As he did so, the cab darted away and three gorillas set on him. He tried to fight but the odds were too great. Finally he was knocked down, kicked and robbed. As he was losing consciousness, he sensed that he was being tossed into a snow bank. As it was a bitter cold night, he would have frozen to death had not a passerby discovered him and summoned a policeman. So he was revived in a mid-town police station and taken home in a police ambulance. The taxi driver, according to the police, figured that he was drunk and had delivered him to confederates. When he is able to ride in taxis again, he intends to write the number of the vehicle and the name of the driver on his cuff.

• • •

Another instance that jars the belief that the sidewalks of New York offer no dangers, involved two young men who acted as good Samaritans One was at a party where a guest became too friendly with concoctions on which the government places a heavy tax. The Good Samaritan offered to take him home. The intoxicated one insisted that the cab be stopped a half block or so from the place where he lived so that his wife would not hear it. The Good Samaritan, being married himself, agreed that that was a good idea. So he led his staggering companion home, delivered him and stepped outside. As he did so, something struck him on the top of the head. Not only was he robbed, even to his shoes, but at a hospital it was discovered his skull had been fractured.

• • •

The other Good Samaritan helped a young woman, who said she had been taken ill suddenly, into her home. Hardly were they inside when a man, who said he was her husband, arrived and caused a scene. After many threats, he proposed a cash settlement. The good Samaritan didn't pay. Knowing he was up against the old badger game, which might cause him no little trouble, he retained an expensive lawyer who finally brought the blackmailers to time. But his fee was heavy. And with such things in mind, the original idea changes to one that in rambling about New York a certain amount of care and discretion is necessary.

HOW IT STARTED

By JEAN NEWTON

That Word "Enthusiasm"

ENTHUSIASM to us today means—well, just enthusiasm! It means intense belief in something, strong excitement on behalf of it; it is the emotion of fervor and zeal. We like enthusiasm in people. But that is as far as it goes. It never occurred to us that being enthusiastic is akin to divinity.

But that is how it started!

We have it ultimately from the Greek "Theos"—God. Literally, the enthusiastic person (en-Theos) is "God-in." In other words, "enthusiasm" implies divine power—to be inspired or possessed by the god!

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

One of the "Long Hunters"

HE SIGNED his name "Kasper Mansker," but you'll find him referred to in frontier history as "Casper Mansko," as "Gasper Mansker" and as "Caspar Mansco." But whatever the spelling of his name, the fact remains that this German-American (who was probably born in some "Pennsylvania Dutch" settlement early in the Eighteenth century) was one of the greatest hunters and Indian fighters in all border history. He spoke only broken English but the voice of his favorite long rifle, to which he gave the affectionate name of "Nancy," was a sharp, clear crack that spelled doom for many a deer and many a hostile red man.

In 1769 he was one of a party of 40 "Long Hunters" who passed through Cumberland Gap and began exploring the rich country of Kentucky and Tennessee. During the course of his wanderings Mansker discovered the salt licks in the present Davidson county, Tennessee, which were afterwards to bear his name.

After several months of hunting, some of the party returned home to North Carolina, some went north into Kentucky and the remainder under the leadership of Mansker built boats and started down the Cumberland. After a series of adventures they reached Natchez on the Mississippi, where they sold their furs, hides and tallow.

The next year Mansker was back in the Kentucky country as the leader of another party of hunters. They gathered together an enormous store of buffalo, elk and deer hides. Then a party of Cherokees swept down upon their camp while they were absent and destroyed all their peltries, whereupon one af Mansker's party carved on the bark of a poplar tree this embittered record: "2,300 Deer Skins Lost Ruination by God!"

But they continued their hunting and on the banks of the Green river one day an amusing adventure befell Mansker. To his ears came a strange sound. Like a shadow he crept among the trees in its direction. Before him he saw "a man bare-headed, stretched flat on the gound, singing merrily at the top of his voice!" The singer was Daniel Boone, thus consoling himself in the solitude of the wilderness while he awaited the return to camp of his brother, Squire Boone. Such was the first meeting of these two great pioneers.

In 1779 Mansker established a settlement near the salt licks he had discovered and to the end of his days "was a strong and helpful prop of the community whose first foundations he had helped lay."

An Early Empire Builder

THEY say that "trade follows the flag" but quite as often "the flag follows trade," and it is not at all impossible that the American flag might not have flown over the Middle West if George Morgan, trader, had not shown it the way before the Revolution. As the junior member of the famous firm of Baynton, Wharton and Morgan, Indian traders, this young Philadelphian took charge of its newly-organized Indiana company in the Illinois country which Great Britain had just taken over from France.

From the beginning Morgan made himself popular with the wild Indian tribesmen of the West. In fact, the Delawares thought so highly of him that they conferred upon him the name of their greatest chieftain, Taimenend, or Tammany. Unlike so many other white men of the time, he treated the Indians kindly and justly and so great was his influence over them that soon after the outbreak of the Revolution the Continental congress appointed him Indian agent at Fort Pitt.

Finding himself thwarted and his advice on how to handle the Western Indians to keep them neutral unheeded, Morgan resigned in 1779 and returned East where he entered the Continental army and rose to the rank of colonel. At the close of the war he settled in Princeton, N. J., where he became a leading citizen and a trustee of the college.

But this empire-builder could not resign himself to life in a quiet college town. During his career as a trader in the West, he had seen the vast possibilities of that region and he had spent almost as much time in encouraging the development of agriculture there as in his trading activities. So in 1788 he visioned a Utopian colony beyond the Mississippi under the flag of Spain. He secured a huge tract of 15,000,000 acres and founded the town of New Madrid opposite the mouth of the Ohio.

But the plotting of Gen. James Wilkinson checked the development of the plan and when the new federal government under the Constitution extended its power in the West, Morgan abandoned his project entirely, retiring in 1796 to a vast estate, "Morganza," in Washington county, Pennsylvania. To him there came Aaron Burr with a similar colonization scheme, but a traitorous one of which he could not approve, and it was Morgan who gave to President Jefferson the first authentic information about the Burr conspiracy. Morgan died in 1810 but not until he had become a leader in scientific agriculture which was to do so much to develop the great empire of the Middle West.

EPIDEMIC POLIOMYELITIS
Infantile Paralysis

We have received this week a warning from the State Department of Public Health that: "The present trend of epidemic poliomyelitis indicates a possible increase during the late summer and fall. In the past, whenever this disease has become unusually prevalent during the winter and spring months, extensive outbreaks have occurred in July, August and September."

This warning is based chiefly on cases which have been occurring at scattered points in southern California, but within the last ten days, we have had three cases reported from the northern end of San Mateo county.

Poliomyelitis is one of the diseases which is most often mistaken for something else. It is undoubtedly these missed cases which are responsible for epidemics. One of our cases was not diagnosed until nearly two weeks after onset, during which time two other children in the home continued to attend school and thus exposed a large number of other children to the possibility of infection. There seems to be no doubt that carriers, or individuals who carry the infection without themselves becoming ill, often spread the infection.

It is vitally important that every person who is ill with symptoms suggesting poliomyelitis be given the benefit of expert diagnosis promptly. Your local health officer will furnish such diagnostic service if you cannot afford a physician.

The following are early symptoms in many cases of poliomyelitis: fever, vomiting, slight diarrhea, listlessness, fretfulness, drowsiness, complete or partial paralsis of some muscle or muscle group, sensitiveness of skin and muscles, spinal pain and rigidity of neck; or, without warning symptoms, victim may awaken with paralysis and slight fever. Abortive cases are common, slight paralysis rapidly disappearing.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

J. S. Irish, editor of the Guernsey (Channel Islands) Evening Press, says:

"America certainly has made advertising a fine art! That was my impression on tuning in on WTIC (Hartford, Connecticut) one recent evening. What I heard was quite intriguing. The speaker opened by reminding hearers that the day was an anniversary (birth or death, I forget which) of Mr. Hansom, the inventor of the now defunct hansom cab. He described the peculiarities of the vehicle and went on to tell something of the history of road traction from the basket chariots of ancient Persia to modern vehicles. There was just a suggestion of advertising at the end. Neatly worked in, it suggested the advantages of insuring motor cars (probably he said 'automobiles') with a certain company. Very clever, very artistic, very effective! That method is, of course, not unknown to print.

"But I feel convinced that radio, no matter how smart, will never oust newspaper advertising. Wireless is so inherently inpermanent that its advocacy falls far short in effectiveness of that of the newspaper. The use of the columns of the newspaper as the best of all advertising mediums is the often expressed opinion of leading advertisers, and I have had much local evidence in support of this theory. I remember a chat with a dentist friends at his establishment in one of our suburban roads. Another dentist had taken an office in a main street of St. Peter Port, which my friend thought a waste of money. 'If you are in a back alley,' he said, 'and have what people want, they will surely come to you IF YOU LET THEM KNOW THROUGH THE NEWSPAPER.'"

SIDELIGHTS

By MARCY B. DARNALL

A mid-western editor apparently is up on his horse psychology, judging from the following item: "George Seyboldt was kicked in the mouth by one of his horses. The horse did not intend to kick his master. He thought it was another horse."

Comedian Will Rogers was thrown from his pony while playing polo a short time ago, but fortunately was uninjured, except for a shaking up. We don't like to see our democratic fun-maker imitating the Prince of Wales like that.

New York City's board of aldermen recently conferred an honor on President Roosevelt's mother, in spite of her protest. A thoroughfare in that city was named "Sara Delano Roosevelt Parkway." When the resolution was introduced, she wired, declining the honor, and recommended that it be named for Charles B. Stover, former park commissioner, but the aldermen stuck to their original intention.

The New Deal has its little ironies, too. The Ever Ready Label Corporation of New York, one of the largest producers of N. R. A. labels in the country, has been summoned before the Compliance Board, charged with violating its code.

An American girl was rigidly questioned by Mexican immigration authorities the other day in order to determine whether she had sufficient money so she would not likely become a public charge. This, of course, is a routine inquiry, and the young woman in question was able to convince the atuhorities that she could take care of herself. She was Miss Doris Duke, heiress to the Duke tobacco millions, and one of the richest girls in the United States.

MINING NOTES

No public code hearing before the N. R. A. administration for the gold industry of the United States will be held until after the national meeting called by the Gold Mining Association of America at Denver on May 18, according to a telegram to the association's headquarters in San Francisco from former Senator Tasker L. Oddie of Nevada, president of the association, who is in Washington in the interest of the gold mining industry of the United States.

Wyoming oil properties with an asserted potential value of $28,000,000 were sold last Monday on the auction block for $7,777,223. Consolidated Oil Corporation, a so-called Sinclair organization, acquired properties and holdings of the Producers & Refiners Oil Corporation in a series of auctions in different parts of the state, ordered by the federal district court. P. & R. has been in receivership for nearly a year.

There will be no retreat by silver forces in Congress in the approaching fight for rehabilitation of the white metal, it is apparent. The leaders of silver blocs in both House and Senate are positive that the question must be brought to an issue regardless of the administration's attitude.

The news that recent discoveries made on the Grange Mine, located on the Fraser river at the junction of that mighty stream with Kelly Creek, will in all probability develop into one of the largest mines in the province, came to Vancouver last week.

All five dredges of the Fairbanks Exploration Company are now in operation, says a dispatch from Fairbanks, Alaska. The last two, both on Cleary Creek, began digging last week, and with them working the entire fleet is now engaged in gold recovery activities for the 1934 season.

A crew of men with a caterpillar tractor and two loaded sleighs got away from Dawson, last week, for Forty-Mile, where they will do extensive freighting of dredge material from the mouth of the Forty-Mile and from Franklin Creek to The Kink on the Forty-Mile River, where a dredge will be assembled this spring and put into operation as soon as possible.

According to the monthly report of James J. Connors, collector of customs for Alaska, gold exceeded the value of all other commodities shipped from the Territory.

In sunny California and over in Nevada two rich strikes have recently been made. The old Morgan mine at Melones has found a rich vein almost on the same spot where the famous 179 pound Carson Hill nugget, valued at $43,000, was located in the fifties. At Manhattan, Nevada, quartz, assaying close to $80,000 per ton was display by J. T. Lynch. An effort will be made to trace the veins as soon as the snow clears.

The Cariboo Gold Quartz Mining Company has stepped up the production of their mill to 100 tons capacity per day, according to reports from the mine. The production of the mine for the year is reported to be in the neighborhood of $400,000.

FOUR-YEAR RECORD IN COAL SHIPMENTS

Increasing industrial activity, slow but sure, is disclosed by ocean shipments of coal to American industrial centers from the piers of the Chesapeake and Ohio at Newport News and of the Norfolk and Western and Virginia railways on the Norfolk side of Hampton Roads. Figures for March show the total dumpings over all the piers were 1,702,863 tons. No other month since 1929 has shown dumpings equalling these figures. They were due to heavy demand from New York, New London, and other ports adjacent to manufacturing plants, which necessitated extra barges to augment regular colliers plying between Hampton Roads and northern ports.

So small that it may be slipped inside a gun barrel to examine the inner surface for flaws, corrosion and other defects, a new instrument is being used to inspect firearms.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 6 FRIDAY, APRIL 20, 1934 NUMBER 39

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Some woman in Greensburg was given a divorce after testifying that her husband dropped snakes down her back. It's getting so a married man can't have any fun any more.

We stock wire netting and screen.

He: "I understand kisses speak the language of love."
She: "Yes?"
He: "Well, let's talk things over."

"And has she made him a good wife?"
"I don't know about that. But she's sure making him a good husband."

Few monuments are erected to persons who observe all the rules.

Rastus met a friend of his on the street who is in the insurance business. After a general conversation the agent tried to sell Rastus a policy.
Agent: "Better let me write you a policy now, Rastus."
Rastus: "No, sah. Ah ain't any too safe at home as it is."

"Sterling," the wall board of satisfaction.

Pompous Physician (to man plastering defective wall): "The trowel covers up a lot of mistakes, eh?"
Workman: "Yes, guv'nor—and so do the spade."

"Jack was the goal of my ambition, but alas."
"What happened, dear?"
"Father kicked the goal."

Most of us believe in pitiless publicity—for the other fellow.

"Wonder why there are so many more auto wrecks that railway accidents?"
"That's easy. Did you ever hear of the fireman hugging the engineer?"

The man who brags, "I run things in my house," usually refers to the lawn-mower, washing machine, the vacuum sweeper, baby carriage, and the errands.

Still, one doesn't get much service out of a spade by merely calling it one.
